It is, however, not altogether hexplicable. The Colony is governed by its permanent officials. These gentlemen think government is their peculiar function and they have as sincere a dislike for public opinico in general as professional ineu usualthe abstract they do not desire any instruccharge of their duties, any more than a lawyer wants instructions from, his client instructions from his patient as to what medicines to administer. But even a tion he can out of his client or patient for his colightenment. Government servants. house and Herbour Board seems on the eve of being call d into existence, and perhaps before very long we may hope to see a Municipal Council established. It is some times a ked by the official clars, who can a Board or Council do that cannot be equally well done by an official? The answer is that in the multitude of councillors there is wisdom. There is no esotoric bystery in the art of government; all that is required for its successful exercise is common-sense and knowledge of the world, buth of which are qualities in which many of our officials are wafully lacking but which of resenting public opinion ought

It is absurd that such a simple matter should entail lengthy correspondence on the part of highly placed and highly paid officials and require the appointment of a special commission and the taking of a mass of evidence before it can be determined. This is dily one instance. Another glaving matapec is the disgraceful absence of any regulation of our street traffic. If a Municipal Council were in existence is it conceivable that it would any longer be impossible for a lady ing mobbed by chair coolies and pestered by the cries of the ricksbamen?
